«Brookline, (Mass.)» The editor of the New England Spectator wants to revise an article sent to him by the Grimkés. Angelina Grimké is depressed, "because our coming forth in the A.S. cause seems really to be at the bottom of the clerical defection ..." J. G. Whittier and T. D. Weld want the writer and her sister to remain silent on the woman question, but they do not intend to do so. The Exec. Committee of the American Anti-Slavery Society have disclaimed all connection with the Grimkés, and will probably treat H. C. W. in the same manner. Thinks that this control over men's consciences is the result of being paid for one's services. Regrets that men think they can buy the[illegible]ay into Heaven. Is pleased

«Brookline, Mass.» The writer tells about the health of Angelina Emily Grimké. "She has been reduced to great weakness by the fever, but that is now entirely subdued." They do not contemplate being withdrawn from the Anti-Slavery cause, even though they cannot lecture this winter. The writer feels that her vital energies are greatly taxed by speaking and her throat is frequently sore. Hopes that Angelina will be allowed by her friends to recover entirely before she is asked to lecture again. The writer and her sister hope to be excused from writing "in the Album," for they "feel an objection to writing in a book that is to be sold." The writer has mourned "that brother «Eli[redacted]» Lovejoy died in the transgression of Christ's comma[redacted] 'Resist not evil' ... I can see
